It's Showtime!

Dancin

Danial

Choreographer-actress Debbie Allen handpicked him for a dance sequence in the television series "Fame."

And classmates at Sierra Vista Elementary School in Upland think he's a pretty nice guy.

So what more could 7-year-old Danial Brown of Upland want?

Probably the same thing as almost every child, teenager and adult in America — a chance to dance with Michael Jackson.

Brown was turned down for the famous Pepsi commercial depicting "The Jacksons" street dancing with some neighborhood kids. ("Everybody in town was there for the auditions," says mother Beth Ann.)

But the young dancer did get to emulate his idol in a yet-to-be-released commercial modeled somewhat after Jackson's werewolf character in the music video "Thriller."

"I'm supposed to turn into a tiger, like Michael Jackson, for Nike Tiger tennis shoes. Grrrrrrrrrr," growls Brown, peeling the velcro straps back on his black-striped orange shoes.

"There are only five (pairs) of these in the whole world right now," he says proudly, adding that he paid dearly for fame and a prestigious pair of shoes.

"They had to rip the tiger make-up off and it hurt," says Brown, smiling; always smiling.

That same ear-to-ear grin has graced commercials for Polaroid, 7-Eleven stores, Mister Salty Pretzels and other national products.

Brown also sang "No Business Like Show Business" with Mary Martin at the White House and performed in Japan with American break dancer Shabba Doo.

And he recently co-starred in a televison pilot for a series called "The Hollywood Houligans," featuring 18 youths in a magazine format. Brown and the Houligans will perform June 23 in a special show at Bridges Auditorium in Claremont.

Audience members might recognize him best as the Quaker Oats kid featured in commercials and on coupons for the company's hot cereals.

Brown was 2 ½ years old when Quaker Oats aimed its film cameras at the toddler and promised to "make a hot cereal lover" out of him.

"Out of me?" exclaimed the cherubic child in the commercial, pointing a chubby thumb to his chest and launching his career in show business.

Mother Beth Ann says Brown could have started his career sooner, but he fell asleep while taping another commerical six months earlier for Quaker Oats.

With blond curls and perfectly round eyes, Brown is a chubby-cheeked charmer. Every compliment is met with a "thank you" and a grin. Questions are answered with a definate "yes" and a nod of the head. It's hard to imagine this little boy being made of "snips and snails and puppy dog tails."

"He's well-behaved and not precocious. Mary Martin fell in love with him," says Richard Galli, Brown's co-manager. "He's probably, for his age, one of the best dancers there is and he's a great little singer."

Brown attributes his success to other things. "On commercials I look babyish in the face. I'm so fat in the cheeks that when I get on TV I look fatter," he says.

However, make no mistake about this tyke. He can be tough and rugged when playing with his pet chow, "Bear," or his dad, Floyd, co-owner of a local insurance company.

"Sometimes I tackle my dad," says Brown, eagerly.

A veteran Hollywood choreographer, Beth Ann says she and her husband try to insulate Brown from the rigors of show business and from the emotional problems so frequently plaguing childhood actors.

In fact, she was initially reluctant to break her son into commercials and later conceded after a friend sent a snapshot of the boy to a high-ranking management agency.

She says the agent contacted her and everything just fell into place.

"Right now we have to realize he's only 7 years old and in the baby stages of school," says Beth Ann. "He's acted nearly all his life and he thinks it's just a natural thing. Up until awhile ago, he thought all kids were in commercials."

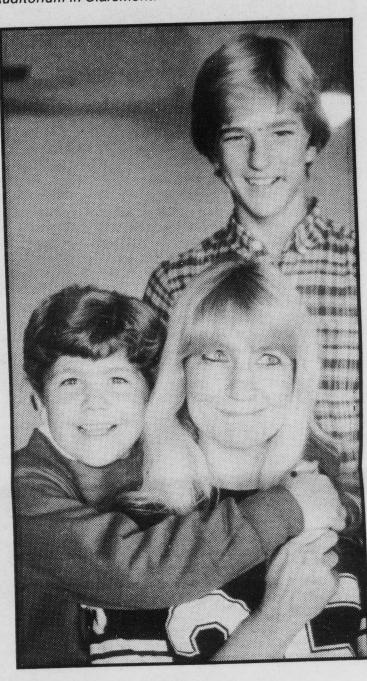

Brown probably also thought all kids had stock in Quaker Oats, owned federal treasury bills and invested in condominiums.

Brown says he doesn't always want to be a performer. He wants to be a policeman and a restaurant owner when he grows up. The menu of his eatery would include his favorites: mashed potatoes and ice cream.

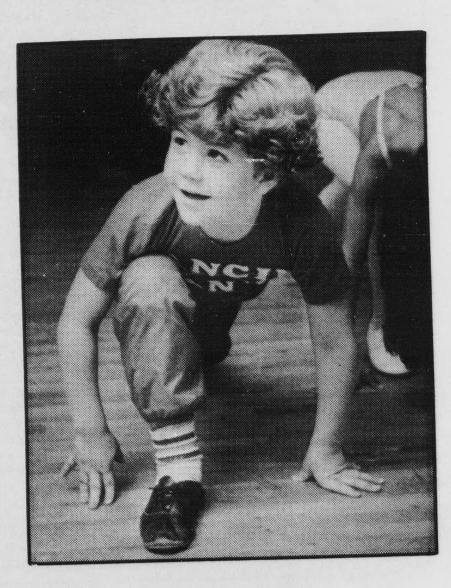

"And it would come with wine," he says.

Chiropractor helps with preventative medicine

By Terri Tirella

Medical exams for Upland High School's would-be athletes took on a different twist last week.

Along with the regular check by a medical doctor, athletes also lined up in the high school gymnacium to be examined by Dr. Ron Vogtsberg, a local chiropractor.

"He (Vogtsberg) did not give the physical, but I understand he could," said Herb Christian, UPHS athletic director.

"He gave a critique on the (athlete's) posture and bone structure and said he would contact parents," the coach continued.

All athletes must be examined by a doctor and given medical clearance before they are allowed to practice or compete in any CIF activities, Christian said.

"You don't want anyone dropping over dead on you because they had a heart attack," he said.

About 78 boys and girls were examined the first day; Christian expects about 90 to be checked in all, including incoming freshmen.

"We usually use another (medical) group to do it, but when they (Nelson Chiropractic/Family and Industrial Medical Clinic) said they would give the money back to us, we couldn't turn it down," Christian said.

The medical/chiropractic clinic turned over to the athletic department the $12 fee paid by each athlete for his physical.

"We're very appreciative that they did volunteer and allowed us to keep the money," Christian said. The fees will help alleviate the already-strained student body budget.

"We'll be able to do other things we couldn't do in the past ... some of our boys' and girls' teams are in need of new uniforms," he said.

Athletes were not required to have their physical done by the group, Christian said. They may get their medical release from their family doctor or go to a different clinic.

"There's a lot of antagonism between the two disciplines, chiropractic and medical," Vogtsberg said. But he said combining the two under one roof was not as diametric as it might

"When we get a new patient they get a brief physical so we know their general health status," he said. "If they have a medical problem we refer them to the clinic."

Vogtsberg said one of the reasons the chiropractic field recieves criticism is that it is said "we treat medical problems with chiropractic (manipulation) and that's not true."

He said chiropractors treat the human muscular/skeletal type problems with manipulation therapy.

Dr. Sydney Norwick, a medical doctor at the Ontario office, said "good pain clinics at universities have all kinds of practices including acupuncture and chiropractic."

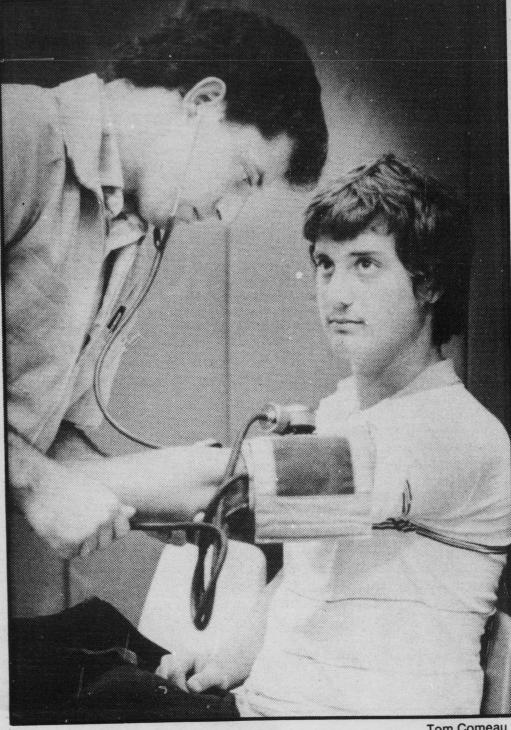

"Chiropractors got into a bad position because they were not trained well," Norwick said. "Now they only treat the kind of conditions they know they can help, not diseases and abscesses."

He said the two practices teaming up formed more of a family health service center.

"A family has all kinds of health problems, some are orthopedic. joints and back conditions. Others are medical disorders, ulcers, skin conditions and allergies ... If someone has a slippage of the spine, send them to a chiropractor," Norwick said.

He said chiropractors are better educated now than previously.

"When I was in World War II, there was this kid right out of high school who was sent to chiropractic school (who was sent to work in a medical aid area). He wasn't good for anything but

Fitness program open to women

Women at the West End YMCA have found the time, the place, and the routine to stick to a regular exercise regimen — Slimnastics. The class is designed to appeal to women of all ages. Many members of the class have been attending Slimnastics regularly for 5, 6, 7 and even 9 years.

"Slimnastics is a complete fitness program, we work on all three components of fitness — strength, flexibility, and endurance," said Sue Smith, physical director at the YMCA, and instructor for the class. "Most women join the class to lose weight, reduce inches, or just firm up but they usually find that along with these their energy level improves, they may sleep better, and their general health improves.

"These benefits along with the friendliness of other class members are what keeps these women coming back for more and continuing a regular exercise program."

Slimnastics is performed to a wide variety of music. That could include warming up to Willie Nelson lyrics, performing leg lifts and sit-ups to the tunes of the big bands era, exercising to classical music or the latest "breakdance" music, and cooling down with Kenny Rodgers.

Slimnastics is a year-round class that meets each Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 9-10 a.m. Fees for the class are $15 for Y-members, and $25 for non-members for a seven-week session. All women may observe or participate in one class free of charge.

The YMCA is located at 215 W. C St., Ontario. Call 986-5847 for more information.

New mysteries at the Upland Library include:

Dexter, Colin: Riddle of the Third

Another English mystery for detective Chief Inspector Morse of the Thames Valley Police. A horribly mutilated corpse found floating in the Oxford Canal is impossible to identify, but appears to be connected with the sudden disappearance of cantankerous Oxford Professor Oliver Maximilian Alexander Brown-Smith. Professor Brown-Smith had received a strange letter promising an opportunity to indulge in undetected sexual depravity. He had taken a train to London and never returned. The trail leads Inspector Morse from staid Oxford residence halls to the shady bars of Soho's red light district. And there are more murders before the mystery is solved.

Harris, Charline: A Secret Rage. After a brief and glamorous career as a successful model in New York City, Nickie Callahan takes refuge in the tiny college town of Knolls, Tennessee to continue her education, revive old friendships, and escape from the noise and crime of the big city. The peace and safety she seeks is an illusion, however, for a rapist is loose in Knolls, and he strikes nearer and nearer to Nickie herself. "The courageous and startling way in which Nickie and her firends confront the stalking terror makes this book heartening to read."

He has no family, no real home, and no indentity except for his detective work, into which he pours all his skill and soul." This is the "Nameless Detective's" eleventh adventure, and what looks like a simple assignment to uncover the identity of a secret admirer for a client becomes a violent involvement with kidnapping, confused identity, and murder.

The setting for the mystery is San Francisco's Japantown. Its roots reach through the Japanese community and back in time to the Tule Lake Relocation Center, one of the World War II camps for Japanese Americans, and a long buried secret.

Lutherans plan new church in R.C.

By Terri Tirella

Local Lutherans have plans underway for a new church to be located on Etiwanda Avenue, north of Base Line Road in Rancho Cucamonga.

Pastors and congregation members from Grace Lutheran Church in Upland, First Lutheran Church in Ontario and First Lutheran in Pomona set up a 15-person task force to form a new church in the Rancho Cucamonga

"We anticipate that the Rancho Cucamonga area is going to grow dramatically, and is growing now, really," said Rev. Jerry Ebbinga, task force leader. He is pastor at First Lutheran in Pomona.

Bob Barton, a Rancho Cucamonga resident who is also on the task force, said he was told by the Rancho Cucamonga Chamber of Commerce about 1.5 percent of the population is made up of Lutherans.

Based on Rancho Cucamonga's population of about 60,000 people, that makes about 900 Lutherans to serve. He said population in 1990 is expected to be at 93,000 and 110,000 people are expected to live there in 1995.

"We figure Shepherd of the Hills, and the Wisconsin Synod have some (of the unchurched Lutherans) but that still leaves at least half of the Lutherans, (and other residents), who don't have a church home," Barton said.

He said the task force had high hopes about church growth. "We expect 28 to 40 families the first year, but we're not setting our goals real high," Barton said.

The task force expects an increase of about 40 families or more each year. "In three years we expect 100 to 120 families," he said. He said once the congregation gets an attendance of 100 to 120 members, the Mission Board of the American Lutheran Church will give the group money to help with initial building costs of a church home.

"Sometimes it takes two years, sometimes three years (to get building going)," he said. "In the old days, the ALC would buy the ground, build a church, call a pastor and say 'here's the church, gather your own flock.' Now we get the flock started and then get the church (building)," he said.

The new church does not have a designated name, that's something the congregation will decide, Barton said.

The new congregation will also elect a church council president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and eight or nine members

Individual congregations are the authoritative body for their churches.

He said the council would meet monthly to start figuring the budget. Items will include rental on a temporary facility for Sunday services, the pastor's salary, car and housing allowance and books for Sunday school.

Rancho Cucamonga resident Roger Granados, interim executive director for Alliance of Latino

Camp Fire President Chuck Richey said Granados is one of several community chairpeople currently seeking financial support for an organization that provides services to youths from kindergarten to 21 years of age in 23 communities, including Rancho Cucamonga.

According to Richey, Granados has been active in United Way, a variety of church, schools and cultural center projects. He's also an ordained minister.

She was also one of three women honored with a Silver Presidential Award of Honor for extraordinary achievements in their offices throughout the year.

WWI veteran gets his recognition

A retired 90-year-old newspaperman and regional history writer now living in Upland recently received a Purple Heart medal for injuries he received in France during World War I — nearly 66 years after he was gassed and given up for dead.

Forest E. Doucette received this belated recognition during a luncheon meeting of the University Club of Claremont at Griswold's Inn. Doucette, a 20-year member of the club, is chairman of its community relations committee.

Participating in the ceremony were Albert E. Norton, a retired Air Force major and a past president of the club, and Leslie F. Zimmerman, a retired Army chaplain. Doucette's wife, Ferna, pinned the medal on her husband of 54 years.

Special guests at the ceremony were three other previous Purple Heart recipients from the area, Elmer F. Roden, commander of World War I Barracks 2379, Ontario; William L. Roper, Chino, and Jules Carvalho Jr., San Bernardino, department commander of Inland Empire Chapter 379, California Military Order of the Purple Heart. J. Tilden Abram, commander of American Legion Post 112, Ontario, also was present to honor Doucette.

A native of Little Falls, Minn., where he was born May 16, 1894, Doucette, as a youth, worked on a weekly newspaper, as an employee of the Northern Pacific Railway, and in the harvest fields of North Dakota.

Although World War I began on July 28, 1914, the United States did not enter the conflict until April 6, 1917, by declaring war against Germany. Doucette enlisted Sept. 13, 1917, at Fort Snelling, After basic training, he was assigned to Company B. 21st Engineers. He sailed for France, the land of his paternal ancestors, on Christmas Eve, arriving in Brest 16 days later.

Shortly thereafter, Doucette helped establish a light railway system to transport battle units and equipment to the front lines for the famous Saint Mihiel offensive, a drive which Doucette says "eventually broke the German defenses and forced the Armistice."

The Germans had introduced the use of poison gas of various kinds earlier in the war, and its use had increased by the time of the Saint Mihiel battles. Historians claim poison gas was the cause behind 30 percent of all Americans killed or wounded in World War I. Doucette was one of the casualties of mustard gas.

Doucette is reluctant to recall details of his multiple injuries, but remembers, "I was taken from the advancing lines to a hospital in Toul, France, and then to a succession of hospitals from the Toul area all the way to Nice for treatment of burn damage to lungs, stomach and kidneys.

He then was returned to the U.S. as a casualty and received further treatment in New York, Iowa and Minneso(a. Eventually, he was sent to Arizona because "Minnesota's cold climate was interfering with my successful recovery."

Doucette's health started to improve at a hospital in Prescott, Ariz., and the shape of his future career as a newspaperman and writer of history began to emerge. In the Whipple Barracks Hospital at Prescott, he became editor of "The Whipple Echo," then one of the nation's leading publications for veterans.

When his partial recovery had advanced sufficiently, the Prescott doctors allowed Doucette to return to his home state of Minnesota, where he resumed civilian life, worked for the now-defunct Minneapolis Journal and entered the University of Minnesota with the hope of completing his college education

Again, the rigors of the Minnesota climate proved dangerous, and he was sent to a veteran's hospital in Tucson, Ariz., in 1927.

In Tucson, Doucette recalled, "the heat was unbearable for a Minnesota gopher. The simple system used to keep from 'frying' was to place a small table, on casters, between two beds. A cake of ice was placed in a pan on the table, with a fan behind the cake of ice."

While cooling methods were primitive, Doucette said, "the Arizona sunsets were beautiful." Again he returned to his writing projects, and wrote numerous articles on veterans' affairs for the Southwest Veteran, a magazine.

A story Doucette wrote for that publication about the Coronado Trail highway between Clifton and Springerville to the north brought an offer of a promotional writing job from the mayor of Clifton — "if I could get a discharge."

The discharge was arranged, and in 1928
Doucette went to Clifton in Greenlee County, a copper mining region where mines were operating near capacity.

"Everyone had a job, and with me on the job, a campaign was started to provide statewide publicity to attract tourists," Doucette said. He was soon producing colorful brochures and news releases describing the advantages of Arizona as a vacation and health retreat. In this pre-Depression period, a building was erected to house the Clifton Mineral Hot Springs.

Success of these Doucette projects was soon noted by several Arizona officials and in 1929, on the recommendation of the Arizona Industrial Congress, Doucette was employed to write a book on the history of Arizona with complete information on the mining industry and other major industries.

This monumental research and writing project required Doucette to move to Phoenix and then visit and live in each of the state's 14 counties.

This book of 500 pages, illustrated with maps and pictures, carried the title, "Arizona Year Book — 1930," and was used in the Federal Writer's Project as a source of official Arizona information.

Upon completion of this writing project, Doucette was employed by the Arizona Republic & Gazette as a traveling correspondent and advertising solicitor in all major California cities.

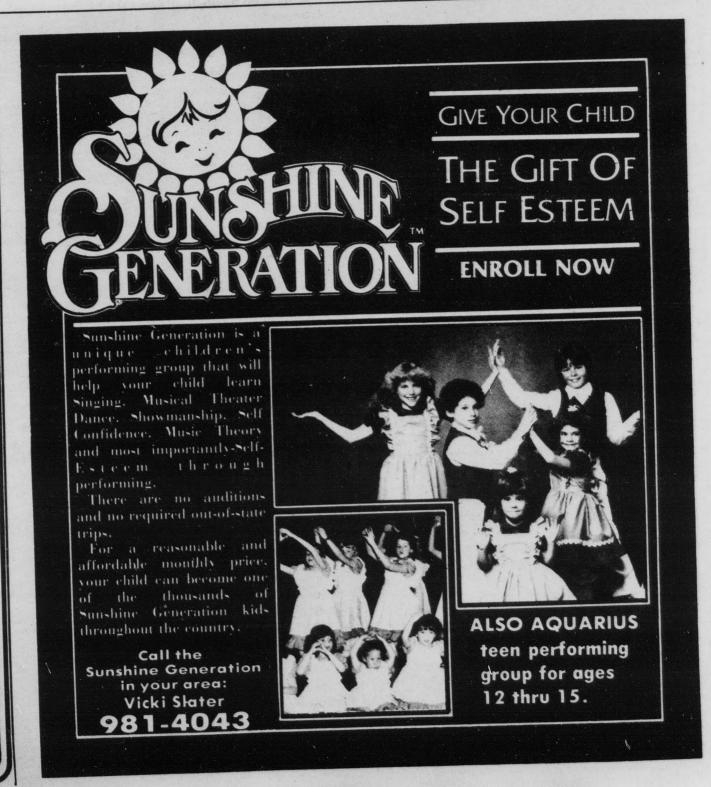

Romance had blossomed during this period, and it was on Feb.16, 1930, that Doucette was married in Florence, Ariz., to Ferna Dail, an art teacher in Clifton. Their only child, Dail, was born in Phoenix in 1931. He now is a retired Air Force colonel, living in Washington, D.C.

Following a period as executive secretary of the Arizona State Board of Health, Doucette moved with his family to Ontario to write special features for several newspapers, including the old Los Angeles Daily News, from 1934 to 1944. During this period he was editor of the El Segundo Airview News for Douglas Aircraft, and had acquired a half interest in the Ontario Herald & Outlook, a weekly newspaper.

The Doucettes acquired full control in 1945.
This newspaper won first place in a National Editorial Association contest in 1945 for the quality of its printing and news coverage. The Doucettes

Students no eggheads at parenting

By Terri Tirella

More than 600 Alta Loma Junior High School seventh graders became parents last week.

The mock population boom was part of a sex education project organized by the science department, said Judy Suter, an Alta Loma teacher.

A "baby shower" was held the first day of parenthood with 680 raw eggs placed in bassinets. Students reached in and pulled out their "babies" from the pink or blue baby beds.

"A few of them got twins," Suter said. Those who pulled out eggs with cracks had to keep their charges. "Cracks are like birth defects or a raised hood on a parked auto means trouble. If there is a parallel in the bicycling world, it would have to be the slow hissing sound of a flat tire. Chances are, however, that in comparison to what it will take to remedy that raised hood, a flat tire on a bicycle is trivial.

If cyclists always carry a spare tube, a tire pump, and a spare valve core, they'll be ready for a flat tire. Before removing the wheel from the bicycle to repair a flat, make sure that the problem isn't just a leaking valve.

Inflate the tire, spit on the valve, and watch for air bubbles. If this is the problem, the remedy is much easier than replacing the tube. Use

In the automotive world, the two little prongs attached to most metal valve caps to tighten or remove and replace the valve core.

If it isn't the valve, remove the wheel from the bicycle and hold it horizontally, with the valve at the six o'clock position. Set the bottom end of the axle against the edge of a solid object which is handy and brace it. If nothing solid is handy, simply sit down with the wheel and hold it within arms' grasp.

Work the hands around the tire, squeezing it to get all the air out and loosen the bead of the tire from the rim. The bead is the part of the tire which contacts the rim. Now grasp the tire at the five and seven o'clock positions and push it away towards the

California must strengthen teacher prep, official says

Sweeping goals to strengthen teacher preparation programs at the 19 California State University campuses, coupled with new systemwide initiatives, have been announced by Chancellor W. Ann Reynolds.

The goals include admissions changes to assure that students entering into teacher preparation curricula are in the top one-half of their classes, and new efforts to raise the quality of the student teaching experience.

Reynolds announced

approached at a meeting of the Board of Trustees' Committee on Educational Policy, contending that the CSU has a major role in improving all levels of public education because of its sizeable teacher education function. Though the responsibility for improving public schools is widely diffused through such entities as the Legislature public schools, Reynolds said the CSU must take leadership by "improving our own programs before we can hope to insist on high standards for others."

She announced the following goals for the campuses to meet by fall 1985:

-"Increase academic standards so that teacher preparation programs admit only from the upper 50 percent of students. The admissions process must assures candidates with good command of students to explore the teaching profession must be available and energetically supported. twelve o'clock position. Move all the slack in the tire to the point opposite; and then push with thumbs to make both beads of the tread with the tube inside pop down off the rim. Once that first inch or two of the tire is off the rim, the rest follows willingly. If the tire absolutely won't pop off the rim, use tire irons to gently pry it free, taking care to not damage the tube or the tire bead.

While the tire is off, inspect it carefully for glass shards, thorns, or other sharp objects embedded in the rubber, inside and out. Also check to see that the rim strip is in place, and that no spokes are protruding which could again puncture the tube.

By all means use a spare tube rather than patching the old tube on the spot. There will be time for patching the tube at home.

take care of problems so they don't arise,"

The purchase of the new church site by the American Lutheran Churchs was contingent upon finding a suitable portion of land at an affordable price, keeping the sensitivity of the concerns and locations of other Lutheran churchs in the community, Ebbinga said.

A location on the east side of the city was desirable because that is where the majority of the new growth is predicted.

Ebbinga said since the purchase of the 5acre parcel of property, the task force has had a two-fold purpose - to bring a pastor in and, at the same time, find a temporary facility to "The national body does the purchasing so we can get the land in advance," the pastor

Planning for the new church goes back two years, according to Pastor Mark Wikstrom. Wikstrom has been pastor nine years at Grace Lutheran Church in Upland and is also on the task force.

"We began to meet early because we felt that another church was needed in Rancho Cucamonga," Wikstrom said.

The call has gone out for a full-time, experienced pastor.

"A lot of things go into it (planning a new church), studying population trends in Rancho Forming a new congregation may not begin until after another pastor comes into the area. It might not be until January or February of next year before Sunday services commence.

The Lutherans will make use of newspaper advertising, direct home mailings and door-todoor research to make the new church known to area residents after the pastor comes, Wikstrom said.

It's likely the new congregation will meet at one of the Rancho Cucamonga school sites until a church home can be built.

"It'll probably start with a multifunctional facility with classrooms and a larger assembly room," Wikstrom said. "The Mission Board has strict standards on the facility (design)."

Making it functional and available to community groups is also a consideration in building proposals. "Right now there are not many large buildings for group meetings (in Rancho Cucamonga)," Wikstrom said.

"Here (at Grace Lutheran in Upland) an Upland Boy Scout Troop and other groups meet," he said. The church facility also serves as a polling place during elections.

"One of our main reasons (for the new church) is not just to provide a church for Lutherans, but to provide a local church for anyone who is not affiliated with a church," Wikstrom said.

Every spring millions of attitude. Regular Americans adopt a fitness routine that combines good eating with vigorous exercise.

According to the Pet Information Bureau, a warm-weather shape-up program is also a smart way for dogs to take off some extra pounds and stay healthy.

If your dog spent most of the winter lazing around the house, then the return of warmer temperatures is a terrific time to start him on a good dietary program and exercise regimen.

"Maintaining good hygiene is critical for dogs in the spring and summer," says Dr. Phillip Fox, staff cardiologist at the Animal Medical Center in New York City. "It is most important during this season to have a dog checked thoroughly for heartworm and to update all his vaccines. When a dog is sedentary all winter, problems can go unnoticed."

It is also important to have your dog examined thoroughly before engaging him in any kind

A PEEK INTO THE PAST

Looking back, it's hard to imagine Chaffey College as anything but a sprawling college hundreds of graduates each quarter but it started small like everywhere else. In 1899, the graduating class was made up of Jessie Anna Pratt, Muriel Adelaide Beamer, Henry Elmoer Worley, Grace Winifred Harwood, Cornelius Duane Hauverman, Frank Nugent Freeman, James Seaman King, Calvet Arthur Phillips. Robert Bruce Ball and Paul Nuna Bodenhamer - just 11 people. It was the ninth graduating class and a marked growth from the first class in 1890 that only had two graduates.

Food wines are making a comeback

By Dan Berger Copley News Service

Wine makers throughout California have been trying hard the last few years to persuade the world that they make "food wines."
What, you may ask, is a food wine?

It is a wine that is made to go with food, which in my sphere of things means a wine that is moderate in alcohol, moderate in acid, and has decent varietal character — and is not too sweet to dominate the food.

A food wine is not, I submit, a wine that is so coarse and monstrous in its aromas that it dominates whatever is served with it. This is the case with a number of so-called late harvest Zinfandels, which are so loaded with various flavors and intensity that they are fun to taste, but poor with food.

These wines are intriguing because they offer so much richness (and often sweetness) that a sip of one of them is fun. But rarely do they match with food. Mostly, they dominate food. I simply cannot appreciate 16 percent alcohol wines with food.

On the other hand, a delicate, well-made wine of modest proportions (alcohol in the 12 percent range), even if it is on the one-dimensional side, would be preferable with a meal to a wine of the above concentration.

Fortunately, wineries are getting back to making food wines, which is what they have been saying for a long time, and now a series of wineries are staging events to prove that their wines go with food.

Shirley Sarvis is one of the world's renowned food/wine combination makers, and often wineries choose Sarvis to stage their events, and to prove the symbiosis.

Two more such events are scheduled in the Napa Valley.

Freemark Abbey will hold two dinners, on July 19 and Aug. 16, at the winery. Cost is $63.60 per person, but considering the menu, the cost isn't that outlandish.

The dinner menu is spectacular, and the wines chosen are equal to the occasion: 1981 Schramsberg Blanc de Blanc champagne; 1982 Cakebread Sauvignon Blanc; 1982 St. Clement Chardonnay; 1983 Trefethen Riesling; 1980 Clos du Val Zinfandel; 1978 Heitz Fay Vineyard Cabernet Sauvignon, and 1982 Freemark Abbey Edelwein Gold.

For details, call the winery at 707-963-9694.

During the mini-course on dance given by Dee Dee's Dance Studio, dents were treated to a break dance lesson taught by Ray Medina, a senior Chaffey High School in Ontario.

Children in grades first through third were given a mini-course on karate by Floyd Burk, instructor at the Lion's Community Center.

The cake decorating course taught by Karen Long was a piece of cake for students. Those attending received a piece of the dessert at the conclusion of the class.

Some children learned to create even more interesting food.

In the "incredible edibles" cooking class, children learned how to make their sandwiches and other foods more yummy.

One way of making a sandwich more attractive is to paint the slices of bread with food coloring, according to Barbara Drake, a resident of Rancho Cucamonga who taught the course.

It was easy to tell which students attended the "Incredible Edibles" course. They were the ones carrying the brightlypainted slices of bread.

What did the youngsters think was the most enjoyable mini-course?

"I liked the paramedic...just the movies and what he said about saving people and everything,"said Russell Williams, a fifth grader.

"I think I liked the writer Tom Bethancourt's presentation. I liked his music and introduction. He's very nice," said Judi Vasquez, a sixth grader.

"The X-ray technician. She showed us bones and everything," said sixth grader Ricky Steiner.

It seemed just about every instructor had his fans.

Alta Loma first graders (top) use their arms and feet to practice karate moves they picked up from community instructor Floyd Burk. Authentic looking Hopi Kachina dolls (bottom) hand carved by Pat King, principal at Vernon Junior High School in Ontario, were displayed during the educator's mini-course. students to observe the school setting through a supervised field experience prior to admission to teacher education programs."

Additionally, Reynolds said she will begin the following systemwide initiatives:

1. Seek to provide incentives by which the best teachers in public schools will serve as supervising teachers for CSU credential candidates.

2. Enable CSU campuses to require course prerequisites to the study of professional education. "We must obtain relief from the restriction that the teacher preparation program fit into four years and relief from other external prescriptions defining the specific content of teacher education."

3. Achieve common understandings about the body of knowledge and skills that should be included in the professional education curriculum.

4. Assist campuses to develop internship and advanced degree programs such as the master of arts in teaching degree as a means to attract students who might not otherwise consider teacher.

5. Initiate, as early as the junior high school level, eforts to encourage minority students to consider teaching as a career.

Artist to hold demonstration

Oriental brush artist Brenda Connor will demonstrate her talent at the Associated Artists monthly meeting on June 13 at 9:30 a.m. at the Museum of History and Art, Ontario, on South Euclid Avenue just south of Holt Boulevard.

Oriental brush painting looks simple and easy to do, however, it takes much discipline and concentration to create the simplicity, strength, and delicate feelings a painting portrays. In Ms. Connor's paintings, a sense of freedom is combined with the ancient tradition of Chinese Art, plus her scientific background (a PHD in Biology) reflects in her technique and composition.

A major accomplishment was demonstrating before a Chinese audience in Taipai, Tiwan in 1978.

Joe Ruttman guides his Levi Garrett Buick through Turn 6 during Sunday's running of the Budweiser 400 at Riverside.

Ruttman readies for upward move

There's no doubt in Joe Ruttman's mind about the importance of the next four weeks on the NASCAR calendar.

"We've made some sacrifices to get to this point, but I think we're going to be in good shape from here on out," the former Upland resident said during preparation for last weekend's Budweiser 400 at Riverside International Raceway.

After a sluggish first third of the season, Ruttman's Levi Garrett team may be ready to start climbing in the NASCAR Winston Cup series points standings. Following his seventh place finish at Riverside, Ruttman moved up one spot in the points race.

Ruttman, who moved to Oakboro, N.C. from Upland two years ago, is in the 14th spot in the Grand National rankings with 1402 points. He trails ex-Jim Stacy teammate Dave Marcis by 26 points and Tim Richmond by 74 points.

Darrell Waltrip is the current points leader with 1912 points, 15 points ahead of Riverside winner Terry Labonte.

"In the past we've always started out strong, but then faded in the last half," said Ruttman as he gold-and-brown clad crew worked on the Buick race car. "So this year, we decided to take a different approach to it."

Unlike a year ago when he was among the top ten in points and a consistent challenger, Ruttman's Buick has been beset by numerous, and nagging, problems in the early going. After 12 races he had only three top ten finishes and going down in the points race.

But the team wasn't without success. Ruttman won the pole position for the Sovran Bank 400 at Martinsville's (Va.) halfmile track and was a factor until two flat tires under the green flag deflated his chances of winning.

He was a contender at the Winston 500 at Talladega, Ala., but had trouble in the next two races at Nashville and Dover, Del. But that was part of the plan, racing a lesser car while repairing the better Buick for the upcoming key races at Charlotte, N.C.; Pocono, Pa.; Michigan International Raceway and Daytona.

Part of the plan was also a good run at Riveride with the same car that won the pole at Martinsville. That part also worked, with Ruttman running as high as second before a nut on the bottom of the left front shock worked its way loose.

"The next four races are pivotal to us," Ruttman said. "Everything's coming together now, the car and crew. This is what we'll need to make a run for the top ten."

Ruttman will have plenty of support in his challenge for the top. Although only a NASCAR regular the last three years, his fans have already organized a fan club.

According to wife Harpo, the fan club has been in existance less than a month and already has a membership roster of 80 racing fans. "They're from all over the country," she said, adding the number doesn't include any family members yet.

For $11 a year per family ($7 for individuals), Ruttman fans get a sew-on patch, membership card, photo and bumper sticker, three newletters per year and an official Levi Garrett hat.

Club membership inquiries can be send to the Joe Ruttman Fan Club, P.O. Box 672. Oakboro, N.C. 28129.

lose Burley for All-Star game North cagers

For Upland High School senior Drew Brueckner, practice continues for the upcoming Pomona Valley High School All Star Basketball game, slated for 7:30 p.m. Saturday, June 16 at the University of La Verne.

But he and his teammates on the North squad find the task ahead just that much tougher with the latest report that Alta Loma's Mitch Burley will not be able to suit up for this year's contest.

Right now, it's a matter of just how long Burley, an all-CIF performer for the Braves, will be out of basketball.

Burley was practicing for the upcoming all-star contest when he suffered a knee injury. After a preliminary examination, it was decided he would need surgery, with the University of Santa Clara suggesting use of its medical experts.

Burley, who averaged 23 points and 12 rebounds per-game this past season at ALHS, accepted a scholarship from Santa Clara last November.

According to Broncos head basketball coach Carroll Williams, orthopedic specialist Dr. Mike Dillingham performed a major restructuring of the knee, having to repair ligament damage by using tendons from the leg. Dr. Dillingham, team doctor for the Santa Clara athletic department as well as the San Francisco Forty-Niners of the National Football League, is familiar with the procedure, having performed several similar operations including one on former Broncos center Dan Larson.

"Time is the whole key now," said Williams. "All of this is really in Mitch's hands now. I don't want to push him at all. He'll have to work very hard. This injury is not as serious as that of Mitch Kupchak because his (Kupchak's) involved bone chips. But it is a major repair."

Kupchak, former University of North Carolina star and current member of the Los Angeles Lakers. suffered an injury against the San Diego Clippers on Dec. 19, 1981, in which his anterior cruciate ligament was torn in half. Doctors later transplanted part of his patellar tendon to where the ligament was, the same procedure used on Burley.

Kupchak, after over two years, has still not completely recovered, seeing limited playing time this season for the Lakers.

Burley's current problem is related to an injury he suffered three months ago during the track season, when he hyper-extended a knee during practice.

"At that time," said Burley before his operation,

"the doctors checked it and said there was no cartilage damage, so I slowly started getting back into shape. Then during warm-ups (of a PV All Star game practice). I came down in it, tried to plant it and something popped. This is a different injury, but the first one the doctors now feel made the knee

"We don't want Mitch to red shirt until he's had a full summer of rehabilitation under his belt," insisted Williams. "We don't know, there's always the possibility he not be able to play at all. Right now, we just want to play it by ear.

"I talked with Mitch Monday, and though he was a little groggy, he wasn't in any pain," added Williams. "He should be headed home either Wednesday or Thursday.

"We're very excited about Mitch playing at Santa Clara. I feel he's a player with excellent potential. A lot of people have overlooked his real abilities of running and jumping. He's a tremendous athlete, explained the Broncos coach. "We were looking for him to play back-up at guard and small forward for us next year."

child abuse and teenage pregnancy are also addressed.

The students have total responsibility for their "babies." "They must keep them with them at all times and can't put them to bed until 8 at night." Suter said.

Should the student choose to go somewhere he or she cannot take the egg, he must secure a babysitter.

"They can have their parents babysit," she said. "If they (the student's parents) want to, fine, if not, that's fine."

Students also must keep a diary of their week of parenthood. "They take baby pictures, make special beds," she said. The egg's grandparents often play a special role during the program.

"Many times, in the diary, students show how much love grandparents have," Suter said. Entries like "grandma always has time for me and my egg," are prevalent.

"Grandparents have sent flowers, made clothing for the eggs and sweaters," she said. The children usually make faces for their egg

This is the fourth year Alta Loma Junior High's science department has held the egg baby experiment. "It's been used in college parenting classes ... it's always been wellreceived here," she said.

Should a student lose the egg, a class court is convened to determine whether it was an act of child abuse, neglect or an accident.

'If students lose their eggs, they have to write a six-page report on child abuse," Suter said.

Suter said boys seem to do better than girls with keeping their "babies" intact, although she said she didn't

'By the time they turn their eggs in, they are tired of carrying it around ... and eggs aren't crying all the time," she said.

That is also reflected in real life. Many teenage girls are deciding to keep their real babies, but after six months the novelty wears off and child abuse is likely to occur, Suter

"We're trying to teach students that parenthood is wonderful if you're ready, but it's not (wonderful) if you're not," she said. □

Ward, Elizabeth C.: Coast Highway

Professor Jake Martin finds the body of one of his students sprawled on his patio, and he realizes the girl had come to him for help he had not given. Her trail leads him back in time and north along the Coast Highway to a lot of abandoned apartments and false leads. Jennifer was obviously running from something. And Jake finds that the danger is still present when he discovers his graduate assistant shot to death on a boat where Jennifer had stayed briefly.

Who is the girl who seems always one step ahead of Jake? And how is Jake's old college roommate, now a leading politician, involved? The Coast Highway leads Jake north to the answers to these questions.

He calls in famous clairvoyante Edwina Charles to help him solve the mystery, but with all the telephone wires cut and the vehicles disabled there are several murders before the murderer is revealed.

Barrister Anthony Maitland and his wife Jenny are visiting in New York wth friends when their holiday is interrupted by a summons to meet with the British ambassador in Washington.

The son of the president of a small African nation has been murdered, and the police suspect the son of the president of yet another African nation. The ambassador fears a blood fued, and he asks Maitland to investigate.

The investigation leads Maitland, Jenny and their friends into strange places and "acute danger."
